Loucks returns to health services

➤ Former HHHS CEO takes over until new leader can be found

Jenn Watt
Editor

A familiar face will be returning to Haliburton Highlands Health Services.

Foster Loucks, who retired from the position of CEO in 2002, has been named interim CEO of the corporation until a replacement for Paul Rosebush can be found.

On Aug. 3, Loucks was introduced to some of the staff of the corporation by board chairman Len Logoza and Rosebush at the Haliburton Hospital.

"We were very, very fortunate to have Foster in the community and have somebody that we could lean on," Logoza said.

After leaving HHHS 10 years ago, Loucks became board chairman of the Central East Local Health Integration Network, which encompasses hospitals from Scarborough up to Haliburton including Peterborough and Lindsay.

A survivor of a two-car collision on South Baptiste Lake Road in Highlands East has been charged with careless driving.

The 80-year-old man from Toronto had non-life-threatening injuries after his 2012 Audi collided with the 2012 Hyundai driven by Jim and Viola Dunford of Harcourt.

The man had been travelling east on July 9 when his car struck the Dunfords' car head-on.

Both Jim and Viola were killed in the crash.

Man gets fine for careless hunting

An Etobicoke area man has been found guilty of careless hunting.

Henryk Eckert was fined $5,000 under the Fish and Wildlife Conservation Act for hunting deer without due care and attention or without reasonable consideration for people or property. He also received a two-year provincial hunting licence suspension, forfeited his crossbow and is required to take the hunter education course again.

The court heard that on Oct. 4, 2009, witnesses observed deer hunting activity on a small property next to Trappers Trail Road in the former Township of Dudley, east of Haliburton. Minden area conservation officers and the canine unit later located evidence of a fawn white-tailed deer being shot with a crossbow in close proximity to Trappers Trail Road and the adjacent cottages.

Justice of the Peace Diane Jackson heard the case in the Ontario Court of Justice, Minden, on May 3 and handed down her decision on July 19.

'It feels like old times,' Loucks says

He retired from that position about a year ago after serving six years.

Loucks said he will "keep the ship on course" in the months between Rosebush's departure and a new CEO's arrival.

"It feels like old times in here," Loucks joked during his speech to staff.

In fact, some of those sitting around the semi-circle of tables served under his leadership when he was a full-time CEO.

That was when HHHS was first establishing its amalgamated health-care model, uniting Haliburton and Minden services under one banner.

Loucks's task this time will be much more modest. "It's a matter of keeping things going," he explained following the public announcement.

"I want to make sure the morale [of staff and the community] is maintained," he said.

Loucks starts Sept. 4 and will finish his term Dec. 31.

As the former head of the Central East LHIN board, Loucks brings a different perspective to the roll of interim CEO.

He praised the board for keeping the corporation in a surplus position, something that has eluded several other hospitals.

"This hospital is not unique, but it's in the minority of hospitals in the province," he said. "From a CEO point of view, that takes a lot of pressure off you."

While his job will entail staying the course, Loucks will also be expected to keep moving forward on important issues to the corporation, including another palliative care suite and acquiring a CT scanner.

He said Rosebush briefed him on about 20 different issues he needs to keep tabs on in his short time in charge.

Rosebush will be leaving HHHS in September to take over as the head of South Bruce Grey Health Centre in southwestern Ontario.

At Friday's announcement, Logozaar updated the staff on progress on replacing Rosebush.

He said a search firm had been retained and was already looking at several possible candidates.

"When we lose somebody who has provided the quality of leadership that Paul has, the first reaction is 'oh my, what are we going to do now?'" Logozaar said.

The firm has been advised that whoever is chosen will have a hard time matching the job done by Rosebush.

"It's always easy to follow a loser, it's really hard to follow a winner," Logozaar said.

Singer 'JRDN' performs at Camp Timberlane

Darren Lum
Staff reporter

Maybe it was prophetic and maybe it was just the time of the day.

But it seemed fitting for Canadian up and coming R&B singer JRDN to be lit by the golden sunset, beaming across Two Islands Lake.

Without an air of attitude, the down-to-earth singer is working hard to shine. He is known to his mother as Jordan Croucher and was all smiles at Haliburton summer camp Camp Timberlane for a few songs and a few days.

He is on his way to making a name for himself as a love song singer, like Marvin Gaye. He has a list of nominations including the 2012 Juno for R&B/Soul and New Artist and a nomination for Urban Artist of the Year from the Indie Music Awards.

Croucher has also completed two albums, including a recently released single Like Magic.

He describes his next album as one for the ladies in his life.

Croucher has already thought of future albums, including his third to focus on the phase of life men experience after singlehood ends.

Summer camp isn't anything new for the Halifax and Toronto-raised singer who is working with Toronto's Grammy Award-nominated Kuya Productions. The song-writing and production team has worked with Nelly and Ginuwine to name a few.

The 33-year-old first went to camp as a seven-year-old and called his mother to go home.

"I was living in Toronto [and] they took us out to camp and scared us. I cried and had nightmares," he said. "They took us up to this hill and they had a big cross. They put us all around the cross like about 15 to 20 kids and had a séance with us ... then they had counsellors in the woods breaking branches. I mean come on we're seven years old. That would freak any kid out."

Scary movies were hard to watch after that experience, but didn't stop him from going to more summer camps.

His visit to Camp Timberlane brings back all of the good memories about camp.

"To come in and be appreciated by these kids is cool," he said. "It makes me feel good about what I'm doing knowing they appreciate my music."

Croucher, who spent a few days at Camp Timberlane last year, first learned of the opportunity through friend (and another up and coming singer) Danny Fernandes.

After arriving on Thursday, Aug. 2, he not only performed, but stayed until Saturday and acted as an honorary counsellor.

Last year he enjoyed himself, reveling in the campers' energy and the beauty of the area. It was difficult to leave for the city.

Although he would love to win, or even receive a nomination for a Grammy, ultimately, he said, he has one dream.

"I just want to be heard around the globe," he said.

Note: Camp Timberlane also hosted So You Think You Can Dance winner Jordan Clarke and Canada's Got Talent finalist dancer Shale Wagman in the same week.

Both were judges for the camp's Dancing with the Staff show - a takeoff of Dancing with the Stars.

Grant money to connect people with food

Jenn Watt
Editor

What we eat has a lot to do with what our parents ate; the choices we make, good or bad, often depend on what we've been exposed to in our youth.

For years, SIRCH Community Services has been helping local families make choices that include good, whole foods through its programs for parents and the Community Kitchen in Haliburton.

With the addition of a $30,000 grant from the province, the organization will this year be able to provide much more.

"Part of the funding will go to exposing families to our local growers and farmers," says Daniela Pagliaro, SIRCH's new manager of community resilience programs.

Six farm tours are planned for this year, starting in a couple of weeks and running into the fall.

Angel Taylor of the Haliburton farmers' market is co-ordinating with farmers and plans so far include visiting the grain CSA at the Bathe farm and Abbey Gardens near West Guilford to work alongside the volunteers in the community plot.

Each tour will end with food – either making it, eating it or getting to take some home.

An idea for the grain visit, for example, is to have fresh loaves of bread made with locally grown red fife wheat for families.

Food will be given away free.

The tours are for SIRCH clients, but are also open to the wider community.

On top of the farm tours, the organization will also be expanding its Community Kitchen program into Minden.

"We chose [Minden] because they've been a pretty keen group, frankly," SIRCH executive director Gena Robertson says.

Minden Hills council will be approached to donate space for the program, which allows individuals to learn cooking skills and get free meals.

In the Haliburton Community Kitchen, volunteers prepare meals that are then distributed to clients of SIRCH, who are in need of food.

The kitchen also hosts cooking workshops such as Moms in the Kitchen.

The Minden model may be slightly different, Pagliaro says, perhaps with people cooking together and then sitting down to eat together.

The Healthy Communities grant does not cover the cost of food, which means SIRCH is looking for donations from local businesses to get meals out to those in need.

There will be six volunteers at the Minden kitchen at first, with more to come.

"There is no shortage of enthusiasm and amazing ideas [in Minden]," Pagliaro says.

Stretching the grant even further, a kids' program is in the works called Stir It Up With Kids for children around five years old and their parents.

Those sessions will teach about cooking and healthy food choices.

After the farm tours wrap up, Pagliaro is hoping to run workshops in the fall or winter discussing what can be done with local food.

"I'm super excited about it," says Pagliaro, who started with SIRCH in July.

Robertson said the programs launched with this money are a creative way to get at deep-seated problems of poverty in Haliburton County.

"These are fun, but the problem is serious," she said.

SIRCH continues to work toward a community where "all members are fed and fed good, healthy food," she says.

The intention is to keep the Minden kitchen running indefinitely and repeat the farm tours annually, Pagliaro says.

To sign up for a farm tour, volunteer with a SIRCH program or donate money, call 705-457-1742, email info@sirch.on.ca or go to www.sirch.on.ca.

Trees, kids and safety

SOcial media was abuzz last week over Haliburton's "diving tree" in Head Lake Park.

The newspaper's Facebook account and website were inundated with comments about the fate of a large willow, which hangs over the Drag River.

Children have been using this tree for decades as a jumping point into the water on hot summer days and lately it's come to Dysart council's attention that it might not be the safest diving board.

During council's last meeting, members considered cutting the tree down altogether and then last Friday, during the Arts and Crafts Festival, a rumour began circulating it would be removed that night.

You can imagine the upset.

According to Dysart's parks and recreation director, several options are being considered for the tree, including a sleeve to prevent kids from scaling the trunk. If deterrents don't work, it will likely be removed.

It's not a popular solution, but restricting access to the tree may be the only way forward.

While much of the conversation around the tree has centred on the dichotomy of kids being kids versus the anti-fun, adult world of law suits and overbearing restrictions, there is another dimension that hasn't been truly fleshed out.

Because the limbs of the tree and the rope were removed to limit its use, children are now climbing to the top to jump.

It's a drop of at least 30 feet into a rather shallow pool of water.

People have been seriously injured, paralyzed and killed from drops not nearly so high.

Overwhelmingly, the online audience has responded to the prospect of keeping kids off the tree with a resounding "no."

An Echo poll online garnered 122 votes with 68 per cent saying the tree should remain standing.

"Let the kids have fun. If they get hurt it's all part of life," one commenter wrote. "Kids are kids, we need not legislate them into a life even more consumed by indoor, sedentary activities," another wrote.

Points well taken in a world where rules often surpass their intended purpose and everyone's afraid of getting sued.

But there has to be a middle ground.

The municipality is on the right path if it seeks to limit access to the tree, given it no longer has low-lying branches. Perhaps something safer and closer to the water could be erected, or a barrier created to stop children from reaching the tree's perilously high crown.

Kids should indeed be kids, but as a community we also need to protect them.

The last suffer

I WAS ON THE PHONE to my buddy this morning. We were talking about the upcoming hunting season, as we always do right about this time of year. Needless to say, both of us were excited in our own way. He as a falconer; me, in this case, as a bowhunter.

Although, for the life of me, I had no idea what he had to be excited about.

You see, Tom flies a red-tailed hawk named Roz for rabbits, hares and squirrels. And, like all falconers, he's almost a missionary, in that he is constantly trying to convert the rest of us to the sport.

I'll admit, on the surface it sounds great. Right up until the conversation gets a little more in depth. That's when you'll eventually hear about the new injury.

This morning, he told me about three parallel talon gashes across the top of his head. Last week, he casually mentioned similar cuts across his arms. A few weeks back, the bird nearly broke his wrist diving into him at 80 kilometres an hour. Then, there is his friend Dion who, Tom says, has what looks like a cleft palate that was actually inflicted by the razor sharp beak of his goshawk.

After a few minutes of this, I interrupted.

"You'll haff to pawdon me if I don't get my falconwy wicense any time soon," I said.

"Pardon me?" he said.

"I said, you'll haff to pawdon me if I don't get my falconwy wicense any time soon."

"Did you release your bowstring across your lips again?" he asked.

"Uh, yawp," I replied. "I twied shooting fwom a diffewent position."

Tom then had the nerve to tell me that I was crazy to use a longbow for hunting, especially in light of all the injuries I sustained in pwactice - I mean practice.

"What's the sqwuare woot of pi?" I asked.

And then I waited while he scratched his head.

"Owww! You ##@$!," my buddy exclaimed.

I would have laughed but, having just come in from shooting, my back and shoulder muscles were killing me.

In the end we both agreed that every form of hunting makes the hunter pay in one way or another. Duck hunters endure horrible weather, early mornings and bad coffee. Turkey hunters have to live with black flies and mosquitoes. Deer hunters endure cold and chilly night at camp. Grouse hunters continually pluck out thorns and need to live with hyper-active dogs. Bear hunters live with a pack of noisy hounds or the work involved with constantly tending to a bait pile. And only moose hunters know the endless agony caused by hauling a huge animal out of a God-forsaken swamp.

As every outdoorsman knows all this is nothing compared to the last suffer, however. That's the one you get when you end the season with an unused tag in your pocket.

When Superman was king

DESPITE APPEARANCES to the contrary, Jake was on a distant planet light years away, observing a family's life not that different from his own. There was a mother, a father and a son. However, the story he read was far removed from his own reality. And yet in a way it wasn't. The comic book told of love and loss, of courage and determination, of secrets and danger and hope. What more could a boy lose himself in on a cool rainy afternoon at the cottage?

The wet leaves outside his bedroom window tossed moisture through the screen making the tangle of sheets, clothes and papers more and more damp. Jake didn't notice or care. He was devouring a pile of dog-eared comics pulled from an old quart basket that had once held a farmer's potatoes. Now it was the comics basket and it never left the cottage except when Jake carted it off to his tree house for a few hours. New comics were added once they reached a certain vintage, jammed in with the other ripped back pages and ads promoting body building and whoopee cushions.

Sharon Lynch
Down our Road

Comics were as integral a part of the cottage experience as diving off the dock or catching bullfrogs. For while Jake also bought and read comics in the city, it was a deeper richer experience in the summer.

There were fewer distractions at the cottage and hours of unstructured time to do with as he wished. If he wasn't outdoors, he was on his old metal bed reading.

For two months Jake had almost daily access to small stores with big comic racks. When his parents drove out to the highway for a newspaper, milk and cigarettes, Jake came along. As they chatted with the store owner, Jake thumbed through the comics. These were on a rotating rack and shelves near the back of the premises. There were also crime magazines, books of crossword puzzles and some paperback novels. Once in a while Jake would take surreptitious looks at the pictures in the crime magazines, the sprawled bodies in shades of grey, the melodramatic women tied and cowering.

But mostly he looked for Superman and the others: Superboy, Supergirl and Jimmy Olsen the man of steel's adult co-worker and friend. When Jake read about their adventures he pictured himself as one of them. He felt the air rushing past him as he flew through the atmosphere, the energy of his probing X-ray vision and the dust of brick walls disintegrating under his powerful fist.

To be admired and famous, to bring justice to villains while saving the innocent and helpless seemed to Jake to be a charmed and admirable life. Sometimes he'd get all fired up, tie a beach towel around his neck so it fell down his back and then run around outside until the towel billowed like Superman's cape. Jake was fortunate there were no other children to see this for he knew they would probably taunt his fantasy. But his mother pretended not to notice and his father was too busy fixing the water pump or repairing the deck.

Jake knew there were other superheroes detailed in comics. There was Batman and the Green Lantern for instance. But they seemed more removed from his life, less believable. Superman on the other hand worried about his adopted parents understanding him or Lois Lane liking him or his grumpy boss giving him his due credit. And if Jake indeed could be like Superman, he had a list in his head of people he would help and those he would seek out with a vengeance. He would be important and strong and everyone would want to be his friend.

Once a week he and his mom went into town to do the week's major shopping. Unlike the dusty little store where they went for daily supplies, town offered a choice of comic book venues. Jake's favourite was the bright and very clean drugstore. The comics and other magazines were racked in the front beside a large picture window. Jake had his allowance and carefully surveyed the offerings before making his choice. Then with the leftover cash, he'd buy a popsicle and sit on a bench waiting for his mother. Although he'd be dying to read the new Superman comic, he waited until he got back to the cottage. Then he'd stretch out on his bed and lose himself for a while.

Billboards cause distractions

To the Editor,

What happened to our beautiful "scenic" Haliburton County?

What a shame that we are inundated with six- to eight-foot billboards. Along Highway 118 alone, from Haliburton to Carnarvon, about a 16-mile run, there are 34 existing structures and at least another 15 or so on the rise.

Wow!

You do not have to look up a business in the Yellow Pages just take a stroll down one of our main thoroughfares.

What an eyesore. You cannot see the forest for the billboards. It is disgusting and a major distraction. It does not make too much sense that you should not use a cellphone nor drink coffee while you are driving as it is a distraction, but it is OK to take our eyes off the road for seven or eight seconds to read an advertisement.

Does this not fall under the distraction law or is it money that is talking here?

Have our individual townships had a say in this art-work and who are we advertising to?

Surely, we have three newspapers, two radio stations and the Yellow Pages to appeal to for advertising, and that is just in Haliburton and Minden.

Let's clean up our roadsides instead of adding more distractions.

Geese becoming a nuisance

To the Editor,

I'm sure that this is a topic of conversation with many who walk along the path beside Head Lake. It has to do with the Canada geese who have taken up residence along the shoreline. They have become a huge nuisance.

I walk the track at the high school every morning for exercise. Yesterday, before I got to the school, I had to wait in a line on the road while 82 geese filed across the road holding up traffic. Some day, there will be a serious accident there as someone will have to slam on their brakes to avoid hitting the geese.

Their droppings are another huge problem.

Walkers have to be very aware not to step in the poop.

I hope that this issue can be addressed by council to rectify the problem.

Donations from the public needed for walkway

To the Editor,

Wheelchair users need smooth, safe surfaces to take them where they want to go. If you are or have been a wheelchair user, or have tried to push someone over bumpy uneven ground, you will know how awkward and uncomfortable the ride can be.

Several years ago, my mother, Joan, a resident at Highland Wood, who has always loved flowers, wanted to go across the garden behind the building to smell the lovely roses planted by the fence. Pulling and pushing her chair over tree roots and the soft grass was not easy, but we got there.

A better way was needed, I thought, for all the residents to enjoy this gem of a garden. It has been planted and tended by Cristina and Brian Barry for years now. Brian's mother, Pearl, was a resident at Highland Wood, our 30-bed long-term-care facility attached to the hospital on Gelert Road in Haliburton Village.

A circular path would afford the residents access to more of the flowers as well as pleasant exercise on a safe walk leading them back to the garden gazebo where they can sit in shady, screened comfort. How to achieve this was the next challenge.

An advertisement on TV alerted me to the company Enviro Paving Corp. from Mississauga, who create smooth surfaces good for driveways, walks, pool decks, playgrounds and more, using ground-up recycled auto tires. These rubbery surfaces are rain permeable, durable in all weather, come in a variety of colours and are just the answer for our wheelchair and walker users. A phone call brought a representative to Haliburton for an estimate on the project.

We needed a firm gravel base for our new path. This was provided by Hawk River Construction of Haliburton last week. A route was traced between trees and around the garden, grass scraped off, earth levelled and a fine surface rolled smooth. Members of the Highland Wood Family Council and staff are all excited to see this vision become reality. In the first week of August, Enviro Paving will come to lay down their rubber topping to our new path.

While the cost of approximately $7,000 is being paid by Joan's family, we are hoping for more community involvement by asking for donations from the public. Donations can be sent to Haliburton Highlands Health Services Foundation, PO Box 1413 Haliburton, Ont. K0M 1S0. It must be clearly marked "Walkway." Tax receipts will be issued.

CEWF calls for better TSW management

To the Editor,

The following is an abridged version of an open letter to Dawn Bronson, central Ontario field unit superintendent of the Trent-Severn Waterway. Read the full letter on mindentimes.ca.

In its response to the report of the federally appointed Panel on the Future of the Trent Severn Waterway entitled "It's All About the Water," the federal government undertook to embrace a balanced approach to water management at the watershed level.

Three years later there is no evidence that the water management program has made any operational changes towards implementing a more balanced approach.

2012 is shaping up to be an unusually dry year, yet the TSW is continuing to operate as normal, admittedly with reduced flows on some sections of the canal.

Currently the water levels on almost all the canal lakes are at or above the top of their navigation range. Meanwhile, most of the reservoir lakes are well below their average levels and several are forecast to drop by early August to levels not seen for more than 20 years. Safe navigation, fish habitat, as well as dock and marina access are being negatively affected.

The Coalition's Advisory Committee is of the opinion that the action taken commencing July 16 to effect an accelerated drawdown of the reservoir lakes is premature and unwarranted. A later start and more gradual drawdown would appear to be achievable by allowing the water levels on the canal lakes to drop to the lower limit of their designated navigation range. The coalition is not proposing such a step yet; rather we would like to see evidence of a dry year contingency plan that shares the pain more equitably amongst all stakeholders, while giving priority to public health and safety.

Although it is now not possible to put water back into the reservoir lakes without substantial precipitation, it would be possible to replace some logs in some of the dams to slow the rate of decline and extend the current level of navigation further into the boating season.

The coalition is ready and willing to work with Parks Canada and its Water Management

Advisory Council to improve on water management issues. We see the need for significant capital funding plus updated water management operating procedures that incorporate approaches for a more balanced approach to handling extreme dry or wet seasonal weather patterns.

We urge the TSW to take action to modify its drastic drawdown of the reservoir lakes.

Researcher seeks help

To the Editor,

In my volunteer Second World War research, I have come across the crash of Stirling N3706 on June 30, 1942. The pilot was F/ Sgt. Merrill G. Bailey of Haliburton, who survived and was taken prisoner of war.

Born July 17, 1919, in Ontario, he died Sept. 12, 2006, in Peterborough at the age of 87.

He was interned in Camp 8B/344 - POW No. 24941. In 1942 his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Bailey, resided in Eagle Lake and were former residents of Weston.

I would like to contact his next-of-kin for information and photos. Any help is appreciated. My email address is with the editor or on my webpage at www.teunispats.net/sglo.htm.

The forest fire

Charles G.D. Roberts

The following classic Canadian poem was sent to the paper by Harvey Bates, who points out its relevance under the current dry conditions.

The night was grim and still with dread;
No star shone down from heaven's dome;
The ancient forest closed around
The settler's lonely home.

There came a glare that lit the north;
There came a wind that roused the night;
But child and father slumbered on,
Nor felt the growing light.

There came a noise of flying feet,
With many a strange and dreadful cry;
And sharp flames crept and leapt along
The red verge of the sky.

There came a deep and gathering roar
The father raised his anxious head;
He saw the light, like a dawn of blood,
That streamed across his bed.

It lit the old clock on the wall,
It lit the room with splendor wild,
It lit the fair and tumbled hair
Of the still sleeping child;

And zigzag fence, and rude log barn,
And chip-strewn yard, and cabin grey,
Glowed crimson in the shuddering glare
Of that untimely day.

The boy was hurried from his sleep;
The horse was hurried from his stall;
Up from the pasture clearing came
The cattle's frightened call.

The boy was snatched to the saddle-bow.
Wildly, wildly, the father rode.
Behind them swooped the hordes of flame
And harried their abode.

The scorching heat was at their heels;
The huge roar hounded them in their flight;
Red smoke and many a flying brand
Flew o'er them through the night.

And past them fled the wildwood forms —
Far-striding moose, and leaping deer,
And bounding panther, and coursing wolf,
Terrible-eyed with fear.

And closer drew the fiery death;
Madly, madly, the father rode;
The horse began to heave and fail
Beneath the double load.

The father's mouth was white and stern,
But his eyes grew tender with long farewell.
He said: "Hold fast to your seat, Sweetheart,
And ride Old Jerry well!"

"I must go back. Ride on to the river
Over the ford and the long marsh ride,
Straight on to the town. And I'll meet you,
Sweetheart, Somewhere on the other side."

He slipped from the saddle. The boy rode on.
His hand clung fast in the horse's mane;
His hair blew over the horse's neck;
His small throat sobbed with pain.

"Father! Father!" he cried aloud.
The howl of the fire-wind answered him
With the hiss of soaring flames, and crash
Of shattering limb on limb.

But still the good horse galloped on,
With sinew braced and strength renewed
The boy came safe to the river ford,
And out of the deadly wood.

And now with his kinsfolk, fenced from fear,
At play in the heart of the city's hum,
He stops in his play to wonder why
His father does not come!

Restoration underway on CF100

Two-seater Avro plane gets fresh coat of paint following months of fundraising by Legion

Darren Lum
Staff reporter

They did it. The fundraising is over and the iconic CF100 fighter plane is ready to be reborn.

On Monday, July 30, the fencing was erected around the pedestal of the historical monument to prepare the painting, which is expected to take four weeks.

Project co-ordinator for the restoration project Chester Howse, who has done this work on behalf of the the Haliburton Legion branch, was raised up in the boom lift to see the work and was ecstatic everything is moving forward.

"It's been a long haul and I'm so happy we're at this point ... we can see the light at the end of the tunnel," he said.

More than a year has passed since the campaign was started to repaint the iconic warplane located beside the locomotive, facing Head Lake in Haliburton.

Howse has worked for the Legion, seeking financial support for the cause from organizations and the community.

Initially the campaign goal was $89,000, but the end total was reduced "considerably" when the option to keep the plane on the pedestal while it is painted was offered.

This option was made possible by the Haliburton-based company Kashaga Paint Design and Barrie-based Heritage Metal Restoration. Howse said it's nice to know he can support a local company with such an important project for the community.

Operations manager Alex Bell, who has lived here for 12 years and is married to company president Cathy Barnett, is proud to be given this opportunity.

"It's pretty exciting to tell you the truth," he said. "It has been part of Haliburton for a long time. It's nice to see that we're able to restore the CF100 and the locomotive in the same year, getting them all looking great."

The two companies have worked together for the past 10 years. Heritage Metal Restoration, Bell said, has done similar work with a jet and tanks at Camp Borden and the boats for the coast guard. Kashaga Paint Design regularly restores log wood homes.

This CF100 job will include 10 workers for a three-phase effort (blasting of paint preparation, adding a barrier primer and finish painting with an electrostatic charged sprayer, using a two-part polyurethane paint) expected to be completed in about three to four weeks. An artist will be used for the finer details.

Darren Lum Staff

The CF100 refurbishment started last week with removal of old paint to prepare for primer and then the finishing coat. The entire project is expected to take up to four weeks.

Bell said the company is working with the Ministry of Environment to adhere to proper practices.

With more than 40 years of painting experience, he said it should last at least 10 years. Howse said it's recommended the plane should be power washed every other year.

Through the week, just before painting, Howse was busy with research to ensure the plane's look is accurate. He said he was waiting information from the curator of the Canadian Warplane Heritage Museum in Mount Hope, near Hamilton.

A ceremony for the plane will be held to acknowledge the support by the people and the community who made this project possible. If all goes as planned it is tentatively scheduled close to the Labour Day weekend. He wants to include veterans and other dignitaries.

There have been many fundraising events such as concerts and a golf tournament at the Pinestone Resort in July.

Echo archives reveal this particular plane had served with the 413 Squadron, the Tusker Squadron, identified by the painted elephant on the engine covers.

Due to its most recent painting several years ago, the squadron numbers are no longer visible. The two-seater Avro CF100, also known as the Canuck, was in service during the mid-1950s to the mid-1960s.

Nicholls hits his fantasy target

Darren Lum
Staff reporter

Nothing lasts forever.

However, Bernie Nicholls could argue some things do after spending a day with the Stanley Cup.

The proud West Guilford son with the beaming smile and an accommodating streak, who was a consultant coach for the Stanley Cup winning Los Angeles Kings this year, will never forget the smiles and wide eyes of those seeing and touching the iconic NHL sports trophy – particularly those of his family, most importantly his father and mother.

The former NHL player, who started his career with the Kings, was among the privileged few to get one of 100 days with it – a unique tradition that started in 1993.

This past Wednesday, Nicholls spent close to a day with the Cup, taking it around for photos to the family's hunt camp in Haliburton Forest and Wild Life Reserve, parents' place in West Guilford, the local gas station/garage in West Guilford, his hunting tree stand, Moose FM, the Dysart arena and Curry Motors.

The night before, he and his family were busy putting out much of his collected memorabilia and awards, amassed during his career.

He shared the day with as many people who wanted to share it and the iconic Canadian trophy donated by Sir Frederick Arthur Stanley, Lord Stanley of Preston in 1892. It cost the equivalent of $50 at that time. The first team to win it was the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association in 1893.

At 35 pounds and under just under four feet, the Cup is not light, particularly after hundreds of requests to lift and carry it.

And yet Nicholls never complained. He never faltered despite the size and heft of the trophy. There was a seemingly endless strength and energy from the first to the last hour for the retired hockey player.

It's easy to believe him when he said his strength comes from the community, his parents, brothers and sisters.

He calls his mother his biggest fan. She was invested in every one of his NHL games, staying up for his late starts when he played on the west coast, even if she had to listen from the next room out of anxiety.

Nicholls said his best coach is and always will be his dad.

He took pride in his face-offs and remembers learning from his dad at 11 on the kitchen floor.

During the playoffs, several weeks before he got the Cup, he wanted to bring it to the hunt camp in Haliburton Forest and Wild Life Reserve and to his tree stand in Dysart et al.

Hunting, he said, is an important part of who he is and is integral to his family. When the hunt is on, the entire family is involved. For his 18-year NHL career, he missed the hunts. Now he is making up for lost time. It was part of his reluctance to coach, but he said he is ready to rejoin the team next year.

There are a few important rules when you get the Cup. Respect is key. Hoisting the Cup is usually reserved for those who have won it. It's one of a few important points of protocol.

Another thing that comes with it is one of four minders from the Hockey Hall of Fame.

Although Phil Pritchard is "the face" of the minders, there are actually three others, who ensure the Cup is respected.

On his last day of a week-long assignment, escorting it to Connecticut, New York, Simcoe, Port Dover, Belmont Lake and finally Haliburton, Walter Neubrand was all smiles.

Neubrand, with a dry wit and corresponding one-lin-

see ALL page 11

When Bernie Nicholls thought there was a chance his Los Angeles Kings could win the Stanley Cup he decided he wanted to get a photo taken with the trophy in his tree stand. Nicholls was a consultant coach for the Kings and is a former NHL player. He was happy to share the day with the Cup, taking it to places in his hometown of West Guilford and neighbouring Haliburton where he played hockey as a child on Wednesday, Aug. 1.

The Stanley Cup had young and old drawn to the Canadian iconic trophy when it made the rounds in West Guilford at the shopping centre (pictured) and Haliburton on Wednesday, Aug. 1.

All achievements are owed to family, Nicholls says

ers, enjoyed the variety and the thought behind Nicholls's plan for the day.

He said most people bring it home to share with family and friends and then take some photos. They often end the night with a party.

It wasn't until 1995, he said, that the Hockey Hall of Fame got involved, bringing minders for the Cup. Up to that point the Cup was just given to the winning team for the duration of the 100 days.

The first week after the winning game is often the wildest, he said.

A school teacher from Hamilton, Neubrand said in his years with the Cup he's only had to cut one person's day short. That was Dominick Hasek. After having a few too many, Hasek threw the Cup in a pool and, in the process, put Neubrand's Hall of Fame partner in the pool, too. Neubrand immediately ended the day despite Hasek's best efforts to change his mind.

The most memorable experience was with French national former NHL goalie Cristobal Huet, who walked the Cup up the stairs to the top of the Eiffel Tower in Paris. He was there for every step.

The Stanley Cup is the only professional sports trophy that provides the winning team an opportunity to have it for 100 days.

There are 52 names inscribed to represent the team.

Nicholls believes his will be one of them.

As a boy (and even now) he said his hockey hero is Bryan Trottier, who won the Cup seven times, including once as a coach.

It's a dream come true, he said, to share a spot on the Cup with a man who stood for so much.

A dream day and one that he and anyone who shared in it will never forget.

Everywhere Bernie Nicholls went there were people looking to touch or take a photo of (or with) the Stanley Cup on Wednesday, Aug. 1. Nicholls earned one of 100 available days with the Cup because he was a consultant coach with the Los Angeles Kings. More photos online at www.haliburtonecho.ca.

Steel Magnolias proves the power of the female bond

Angelica Blenich
Staff reporter

They laugh, they cry, they share their secrets. The women who make up Steel Magnolias prove there's much more to life than just getting your hair done. The irony, however, is many of life's biggest moments can occur in a place as insignificant as a beauty parlour. Or in this case, as important. Part of the Highlands Summer Festival, Steel Magnolias opened up to a female-dominated audience on July 30 at the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion. Set in Louisiana, the play is based on a hit Broadway show, which was later made into a box office smash, featuring stars such as Julia Roberts, Sally Fields and Dolly Parton.

The Haliburton show has a few recognizable names itself, including Maureen James, Lorraine McNeil and Kathryn Boyd.

Directed by Scot Denton, the entire play takes place at Truvy's Beauty Parlour, where the motto "there's no such thing as natural beauty" is sworn by.

The opening scene introduces the audience to six southern women, all of whom have a personality that is larger than life and an accent as thick as honey.

Main character Shelby Eatenton-Latcherie is getting ready for her wedding day and mother M'Lynn Eatenton is not that far behind with a joke or criticism at the drop of a hat.

The storyline centres on this mother/daughter duo, whose love/hate relationship couldn't be more true to life.

Exemplifying the phrase "can't live with them, can't live without them," Shelby and M'Lynn are as close as a mother and daughter could be and are there for one another through the good times and bad.

And this story offers plenty of both.

Boyd gives a convincing portrayal of a mother who loves her daughter and only wants the best for her. Ultimately wishing she could have given up her life for her.

When you mix women and hair salons drama is bound to unfold. Based on the Broadway smash, Steel Magnolias hits the stage at the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion as part of the Highlands Summer Festival. The show opened on July 30 and runs until Aug. 9. From left, Lorraine McNeil, Maureen James, Lindsey Hawley, Kathryn Boyd, Kelly McNamee and Laura Ostler-Schell.

Comedic relief is woven throughout the show by McNeil and James, whose characters Ouiser Boudreaux and Clairee Belcher exude a comfort and camaraderie that is enjoyable to watch.

At times poignant, at times emotional, the play is all the while entertaining as audience members become invested in the characters and their lives.

While the play is family friendly, it is particularly suited for women in the middle phase of their life, who can relate to the subject matter at hand.

The set design and costumes lend a charming quality to the show but it is the women who command the most attention, with their zany one-liners and their love for one another. Those looking for some womanly chit-chat can still do so as the show is on stage until Aug. 9.

Just don't forget the tissue at home.

Campers help local students get ready for school

Angelica Blenich

The kids at Camp White Pine showed they care about more than just water skiing and summer fun.

On July 28, more than 400 campers filled 50 backpacks with school supplies for students heading off to Stuart Baker Elementary School, J.D. Hodgson Elementary School and Haliburton Highlands Secondary School this fall.

Part of the Kids 4 Kids program, the initiative was conceived by Adam and Dana Kronick, directors of Camp White Pine, just outside Haliburton Village.

Along with the notebooks, pens, water bottles and other items that went into the bags, campers wrote personalized notes to the students.

Messages like "I hope you like your backpack and have a wonderful year at school" were tied onto the bags or placed inside.

The emphasis of the program is to give back to those less fortunate and encourage campers to make a difference in their community.

Other Kids 4 Kids projects have included a winter clothing drive and a book drive.

The backpacks will be distributed to students by school principals towards the end of the summer.

Stuart Baker Elementary School principal Andrea Borysiuk and J.D. Hodgson principal Elaine Fournier extended their thanks to the campers for their generosity. "We really appreciate this," said Borysiuk, adding the bags and supplies will be put to good use.

Colourfest has co-ordinator beaming

Angelica Blenich
Staff reporter

Thir year's Colourfest has Gail Stelter buzzing with enthusiasm.

Hired by the Haliburton Business Improvement Area to be the co-ordinator of this year's festival, Stelter has already got the wheels in motion to improve and expand the event.

Scheduled to take place on Sept. 29, Colourfest will be filled with exciting entertainment from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Similar to last year, entertainment will include live music, a pancake breakfast, vintage cars on display and family friendly activities.

This year many of the attractions will focus on local talent, including a new performance by Artist in the Schools, who will be dancing in the streets.

"Julie Barban and Chyna Schell will be leading dances for about four hours with anyone who is there," said Stelter.

Barban and Schell will be using props during their dances, which are open to people of all ages.

Stelter is working hand in hand with the BIA's Colourfest committee, which has helped tweak the event, now in its fourth year.

"One thing that's new is the inclusion of community groups and organizations," said Stelter.

The co-ordinator put a call out to not-for-profit organizations, inviting them to use Colourfest as a venue for their fundraising initiatives.

"Anything they raise will go to their organizations," she said.

For example, the Canadian Federation of University Women will be selling cookies in a jar at the event to support their scholarship initiative.

Another new idea this year is to have a farmers' market incorporated into the event.

A pet contest will be held again in Head Lake Park and all are invited to sign up for it. Shout Sister will be providing a flash choir, at a surprise time and location.

Like last year there will be live music throughout the event, this year on two stages located in the village. One being in Head Lake Park, the other on Highland Street.

"Of the 12 bands that are going to be on these stages, you will have six bands at each stage and of those bands four of them are local talent."

Held the weekend prior to Thanksgiving, Colourfest will be working in conjunction with the Haliburton County Studio Tour, which is celebrating its 25th anniversary this year.

Organizers of the tour will have a tent set-up along Highland Street promoting the sites and artists included in the tour.

Hoping to draw visitors of the event into the downtown shops, Stelter has created a Colourfest passport, which will be handed out at the festival by street greeters.

"The passport will list the names of the local stores and if you go into the stores and get your passport stamped, at the end of the day your passport will be put into a draw for a wonderful prize," said Stelter.

One of the biggest challenges has been logistics, with Stelter still trying to figure out where to locate all the attractions.

"I'm having fun. For me, the biggest part of it is meeting all the people involved."

Stelter credits the hard work done in previous years on creating an exceptional event for the Highlands, which is now recognized throughout the province thanks to an achievement award from Festivals & Events Ontario.

"I think [previous co-ordinator] Jerelyn [Craden] did an excellent job and we're just building on the excellence that was established," said Stelter.

The co-ordinator is hoping more businesses will support the event through sponsorships, which have been categorized into fall themes, including golden oak, silver birch and red maple.

Stelter is still seeking interested organizations wanting to get involved with a fundraising idea and encourages them to contact her.

She is also looking for volunteers leading up to and on the day of the event.

For more information on Colourfest visit www.colourfest.ca or contact Stelter at 705-457-3768 or email info@colourfest.ca.

Co-ordinator of this year's Colourfest, Gail Stelter is excited about the festival's line-up, which will include live music featuring local talent, vintage car displays, activities for children and dancing demonstrations.

Set to take place in Haliburton Village on Sept. 29, Colourfest is still in need of representation from local organizations, sponsors and volunteers.

Rise in southern Ontario Lyme disease prompts local warning

An "uptick" in cases of Lyme disease in some parts of Ontario is a reminder that local residents should be cautious of ticks that can spread the illness, the local health unit warns.

The population of blacklegged ticks is spreading into new areas of the province, according to the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit. The ticks are very tiny and cannot fly, but will settle on tall grasses and bushes until they can attach themselves to a passing person or animal. These ticks will feed on their host's blood, and in some cases, may transmit Lyme disease to the individual.

"Lyme disease can be very devastating to a person, so you should be watchful for these ticks when camping, fishing, hiking and being active outdoors," says Richard Ovcharovich, manager of environmental health with the HKPR District Health Unit. "The best advice is: know the bug, know the bite, and know what to do."

Symptoms of Lyme disease can include fever, headache, tiredness and muscle and joint pains. A very good indicator of Lyme disease is a skin rash in the shape of a bull's eye. These symptoms can occur as soon as three days or as long as a month after a tick bite. Anyone experiencing symptoms of Lyme disease should seek immediate medical treatment. "The earlier Lyme disease is treated, the better it is for the person," Ovcharovich adds.

To prevent ticks from biting, the health unit advises local residents to:

- Wear light-coloured clothing, which makes ticks easier to spot.
- Wear closed footwear and socks, a long sleeved shirt and long pants. Tuck your pants into your socks.
- Use a tick repellent that has DEET, following the manufacturer's directions.
- If in an area where you might get bitten by ticks, search your body for ticks at least once a day. Pay special attention to the scalp, groin and armpits.

If you find a tick on your body, use tweezers to remove it. Grasp the tick as close to your skin as possible. Pull it straight out, in a gentle but firm manner. Save the tick alive in a jar or screw-top bottle, if you can, and take it to your health care provider or local health unit office for testing to determine if the tick is the type that can carry Lyme disease. If necessary, further testing can then be done to check for Lyme disease.

For more information on Lyme disease, call the health unit at 1-866-888-4577 or visit www.hkpr.on.ca.

Performers tuned in to Forest Festival

Angelica Blenich
Staff reporter

Some are looking forward to the fresh air.

Others seek the thrill of hearing their instrument or voice reverberate off the water.

But what they all have in common is the excitement of playing in the Highlands.

The line-up of talent for this year's Forest Festival all have unique and different styles.

Set to take place from Aug. 15 to the 19, the annual festival will once again invade the Haliburton Forest and Wild Life Reserve with an eclectic collection of musical genres.

Performers include John McDermott, The Jim Cuddy Trio, Amanda Martinez, Hilario Duran and Jane Bunnett, The Bebop Cowboys with Russell DeCarle and the Suzie Vinnick Trio.

Taking place at either the Bone Lake Amphitheatre or the Historic Logging Museum, each show does undoubtedly delight audiences as much as it will those on stage.

While the Highlands is no stranger to opera performances, the festival will provide an outdoor venue for the Highlands Opera Studio, which will open the event with an excerpts concert.

Celebrated musician John McDermott will be bringing his melodic, tenor voice to Haliburton County on Aug. 17.

Born in Glasgow, Scotland, McDermott has become one of Canada's most recognizable imports, singing the national anthem at the opening of Toronto Maple Leafs games and recording a famous version of Danny Boy.

This November, McDermott, 57, will be celebrating his 20th year as a professional musician.

While somewhat reluctant to take the plunge into the music industry, the decision has been a wise one for the singer, who has gone on to earn international accolades, sell platinum records and tour throughout the world.

"It's been a really, really interesting journey. I've seen most of the world, been places a lot of people have never been," he said.

One place McDermott hasn't visited is Haliburton, although he almost bought a house in the county about 10 years ago before settling down just north of Parry Sound.

The singer is looking forward to spending time in the Highlands this August.

"We've heard a lot of good things about it," he said.

McDermott, along with his band accompaniment, will be performing songs from two recently released albums, The Old House and My Gentle Harp at the festival.

"I never did like the idea of being pigeon-holed as a traditional Celtic singer ... most of our stuff is traditional and contemporary folk."

And of course the performance will include McDermott's rendition of Danny Boy.

"I can't do a gig without it, that seems to be the law."

Russell deCarle, left, of Prairie Oyster will be joining Steve Briggs and his band the Bebop Cowboys for some Western Swing at this year's Forest Festival, held at the Haliburton Forest and Wild Life Reserve from Aug. 15 to 19. /Photo submitted

McDermott is familiar with other performers at the festival, including fiddler Anne Lindsay who splits her talent with the tenor and the Jim Cuddy Trio.

But the singer isn't sure he will follow the example Lindsay has set.

"Anne played Haliburton and after her show she just put down her fiddle and dove into the lake," said McDermott.

With a concert venue next to a lake, opportunities are bound to present themselves, something Amanda Martinez is looking forward to.

The Latin jazz singer and musician will be bringing her world music to the lakeside stage for the first time at this year's festival.

A singer her whole life, Martinez became a professional musician 11 years ago.

"Growing up I loved music but never thought of it as a career," she said.

Following a degree in biology and a master's in international business, Martinez worked in the banking world before pursuing her dream.

The child of a Mexican mother and South African father, the singer doesn't have to look far to find musical influences of a worldly nature.

"Both my parents have a huge record collection that I would listen to growing up ... and my family is musical, I was just immersed in it," she said

Singing mostly in Spanish, Martinez writes a lot of her own music.

Martinez along with her band will be bringing an international sound to the Haliburton Forest, where her music will be filled with Brazilian beats, Spanish Flamenco and Cuban rhythms.

"I'm really looking forward to bringing the Latin spice and sounds up there and looking forward to having an audience that we can take away, without having to leave Haliburton."

Steve Briggs of The Bebop Cowboys is also looking forward to bringing a new sound to the festival in the way of western swing.

Russell de Carle of Prairie Oyster, who took to the festival's stage last year, will accompany the group.

With seven musicians set to hit the stage, Briggs describes the group's sound as "dance music with fiddles, accordions and steel guitars."

"I call western swing one of the lost tribes of jazz ... it originated out of Texas and Oklahoma," said Briggs.

Upbeat and funky, the genre was a precursor to rock and roll, said Briggs, who believes the style also has elements of blues, bluegrass and country to it.

The band will be performing songs off their recent album, Canadian Dance Hall, which features Canadian talent such as Sarah Harmer, Wendell Ferguson and Chris Whiteley.

"We have fun every time we're playing...we really, really enjoy ourselves," said Briggs, who performed at last year's festival.

Another frequent performer in the Highlands is Suzie Vinnick, who will be performing with Rick Fines and Roly Platt to close out the festival.

"Rick and Roly are pretty bluesy and I like to mix it up, but I think we will be a bluesy set. It's always a treat getting to work with those two; it will be nice and intimate," said Vinnick.

Playing guitar since she was nine years old, Vinnick has spent a lifetime as a musician and singer/songwriter.

With music appearances at past Winter Folk Camps and courses she has taught at Fleming College, Vinnick loves many things about the Highlands.

"When I taught at Winter Folk Camp it was amazing to spend a few days up there ... we got out for a snowshoe on our last day there and I just remember my body and my lungs saying don't leave. It was amazing to be in all that fresh air," she said.

Program poised to complete building

Jenn Watt
Editor

Chris Lalonde wishes there had been a sustainable building program when he was starting out.

The site lead for Fleming College's Abbey Gardens project near West Guilford was a veteran in the construction industry when he first completed the program last year.

He liked it so much, he came back as an instructor.

"I took [the course] last year and loved it," he said on the site in July.

The hands-on program has students learn how to construct a building from scratch with sustainable materials and practices.

At the end of last month, the building was starting to resemble the vision of Abbey Gardens – a property hosting community gardens and retail space.

While the gardens have been operational for years, the building has only been under construction for a few months with a completion date of Aug. 23.

There are several features that make this 2,200-square-foot building special, designer Pat Marcotte explained.

The walls are made with straw bales, both prefabricated and made on-site by students.

There is geothermal heating and cooling using the natural temperature of the earth to control the climate inside.

Recycled products have been salvaged from other companies to reduce waste.

The windows are triple glaze glass for greater insulation and positioned just under the roofline to allow for more heat in winter, when the sun stays low, and more cool in the summer when the sun is overhead.

It is solar-power ready, positioned with the roof's slope facing the sun, and already wired for the panels.

"It's built strong enough to support them," Marcotte said.

The straw bales have become a hallmark of sustainable building construction in the Highlands.

The Fleming program has used them in the walls of the 4Cs Lily Ann in Haliburton, the Kinark Outdoor Centre north of Minden, the R.D. Lawrence Place in Minden and now at Abbey Gardens.

Since the program began in 2005, eight buildings have been erected.

Marcotte said straw bales offer greater insulation with no chemicals and are do-it-yourself friendly.

Several students from the program have expressed interest in making their own homes out of straw bales, Lalonde said.

While Abbey Gardens paid for the materials to create the retail space, the labour of the students is free.

Ted Brandon, training officer at Fleming, said the partnership with a community garden organization is the perfect match for the philosophy of the sustainable building program.

"The nice thing with Abbey Gardens is they're all about sustainability," he said.

The program has also attracted an unusually high number of female students.

"It's bringing women into the field," Lalonde said, noting construction is still a male-dominated industry.

About half of the class's 17 students are women.

Alongside the gender shift, there is also a change in the way people are viewing sustainable building.

When Marcotte built his own straw bale home in 1999, it was the sixth or seventh in Ontario.

Today it is one of a thousand.

"People seem pretty open," he said.

When Fleming's program started seven years ago, people used to say there were no jobs in sustainable building, Brandon said.

Now there are internships for graduates at EllisDon, a large Canadian construction company responsible for creating the SkyDome among other things.

Every Tuesday until the end of the month, members of the public can pop by Abbey Gardens to take a tour of the building's progress. Tours can be arranged from 3 to 5 p.m.

Highlands inspire

A Brush with the Highlands event invited artists to paint all over Highlands East, including private properties. It drew more than 45 plein-air artists (in acrylic, oil, pastels and watercolour) from all over Ontario. They represented the up and comer to the established. The event started with a one day workshop on Thursday, Aug. 2 and ended with an art show and sale of work from the event at the Lloyd Watson Memorial Centre on Sunday, Aug. 5.

Public may pay for Elections Ontario breach

Chad Ingram
Staff reporter

County residents may want to keep a close eye on their bank accounts.

Haliburton-Kawartha Lakes-Brock is one of 20 to 25 ridings in the province that may be affected by a security breach at Elections Ontario.

In April, two digital memory sticks containing the personal information of some 2.4 million Ontarians were lost by Elections Ontario staff.

The agency did not go public with the information until July 17 and it was determined that residents of Haliburton-Kawartha Lakes-Brock could be affected.

"We know that we're possibly affected," MPP Laurie Scott told the paper. "I don't know if they're ever going to be able to tell."

The information on the memory sticks was not encrypted – encoded as to be indecipherable except to those who know how to decode it.

Privacy commissioner Ann Cavoukian's investigation has concluded this was because staff didn't know what encryption meant.

"They didn't understand what encrypted was, they got it confused with compressed," Scott said.

The privacy commission's investigation also revealed staff continued to use memory sticks, without using encryption software, after the two sticks were lost.

The sticks contained names, dates of birth, addresses, gender and whether or not people voted in the last election.

"I don't like anyone to be vulnerable," Scott said, encouraging constituents to keep an eye on their bank accounts and their mail. "It's potentially a lot of information out there."

The Progressive Conservatives are calling on chief electoral officer Greg Essensa to explain what happened.

"We want Greg Essensa before a committee and bloody-well explain this because it's not acceptable," Scott said. "I think he better have some pretty good answers if we can get him to committee."

Scott was asked if she thought Essensa should resign.

"I would put it as a strong possibility, but I would give him a chance to come to committee," Scott said. "If he can't explain why he didn't have proper oversight, then he should not be in that position."

Essensa was appointed to the position by the legislature in 2008.

Haliburton hoe down

Moonlight Madness drew hundreds to the annual street party that takes over Highland Street and the downtown area, which offers the public an opportunity to be entertained by live music and dancing, to save money through once-a-year discounts, educated through several booths for local organizations and upcoming events and fed perennial favourites such as the Beef on the Bun offered by the Haliburton Fire Department.

Clockwise, from top, despite the crowds (pictured) the Moonlight Madness event goes and vendors said attendance seemed lower than other years; three-year-old Sophia Donovan, who was visiting grandparents from Soyers Lake, takes a shot at the mini putt game at the Youth Unlimited Kids Fun Zone; Colin Glecoff, 7, left and sister Cassidy take aim at the dinosaur in the bean bag toss game at the Youth Unlimited Kids Fun Zone and The Haliburton Highland Twirlers dancers brought people from the crowd to join them in dancing during Moonlight Madness on Highland Street in Haliburton on Friday, Aug. 3. Formerly called Midnight Madness, the event started an hour earlier and ended at 10 p.m. It was sponsored by the Haliburton County Echo

Exchange student takes in Haliburton

Angelica Blenich
Staff reporter

She loves swimming, kayaking and being outdoors.

In many ways Astrid de La Briere is a perfect match for Haliburton.

The 17-year-old exchange student, who was born and raised in France, took in all that life in the Highlands had to offer during her month long visit this past July.

From just outside of Paris, Astrid came to Canada through a short term exchange Program facilitated by the Minden Rotary Club.

Club member Joanna Penfold visited the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School's Interact Club to explain the program to interested students.

Daryl Woodley was immediately taken.

Daryl, 16, submitted an application and did an interview before being accepted into the program, which handles all the costs minus the plane fare.

"I'm super excited," said Daryl. "I've always wanted to go to France."

Living just outside Haliburton Village on Long Lake, Daryl and her family spent much of their time showing Astrid what a typical summer in July feels like.

Perfect weather and all.

"I like it, it's so beautiful. The people are very friendly and there is good weather," said Astrid.

Not knowing what she would find, the trip has exceeded any expectations she might have had.

"We're pretty sure she thinks the only thing Canadians do is swim," said Daryl.

Visits to the Dorset Tower and camping trips were also enjoyed by the girls, who both like to spend time outdoors.

One of the most memorable moments during Astrid's exchange was a trip to Canada's Wonderland.

"Right before we were about to go down on the Drop Zone she started freaking out and grabbing my hand and screaming her head off. By the time she got down, her entire face lit up," said Daryl.

While Astrid isn't fluent in English, she is able to get by and has learned a lot of the language since she arrived.

"When she first got here we took the dictionary to the dinner table every night so we were able to communicate, but now we don't anymore," said Daryl.

Describing the town of Haliburton as "cute," Astrid says the experience has been "incredible."

For Astrid her first ever visit to Canada has just flown by.

Before the end of the exchange the Woodleys made sure to take her to popular sights such as the CN Tower and Niagara Falls.

In France, Daryl will be visiting iconic spots such as the Eiffel Tower, Notre Dame Cathedral, Champs-Elysees, Arc de Triomphe and the Musée du Louvre.

"I'm probably going to be really exhausted but I'll survive," said Daryl, who has never been away from home for a month before.

She has a limited grasp of French, but is hoping to improve her knowledge this summer.

Upon arriving in France, Daryl will be spending part of her exchange near Paris and the remainder at Astrid's summer residence on an island off the coast of France.

Not knowing what to expect prior to Astrid's arrival, it didn't take long for them to get accustomed to one another.

"It was intimidating at first but now we act like sisters and play with each other's hair," said Daryl.

The first exchange for both girls has left each wanting to experience more places in the future, including Brazil for Astrid.

Studio tour includes treasure hunt

Roadtrip!

This year, the artists participating in the Highlands East Studio Tour are celebrating their 10th anniversary. Mark your calendar for two memorable weekends (Aug. 11 to 12 and Aug. 18 to 19) and take a drive through the quaint communities of Irondale, Gooderham, Tory Hill, Wilberforce, Paudash and Harcourt. Tucked in among the hills and lakes and back roads, you'll discover their workshops and studios. You'll meet the artists and see demonstrations of woodworking, painting, jewelry making and other creative arts. And this year, as part of the 10th anniversary celebration, you'll get a chance to acquire an Algonquin Gateway Association coin.

Geocaching Opportunity While you are hunting for arts and crafts, you will also be able to hunt for special Algonquin Gateway Association coins, hidden in seven caches close to each studio entrance. If you are new to geocaching, you may want to attend the geocaching seminar Monday, Aug. 13 at 7:30 p.m. at the Robert McCausland Community Centre in Gooderham. Hands-on basics of geocaching and the caches put out for the studio tour will be discussed.

Bring your questions about this fascinating family sport. Jan Simon, artist and owner of Dreamweaver Country Boutique in Wilberforce, is a founding member of the Highlands East Artists and the chairwoman of this year's tour. Participating artists have changed over the years, she says, assuring that the exquisite one-of-a-kind creations offer visitors unique experiences. A map of the tour is available online at www.highlandseastartour.com.

Whether you visit one studio or several, you're sure to find out why so many artists have chosen this picturesque part of the Highlands to live, work and create.

Summer day camp brings out the reptiles

Angelica Blenich
Staff reporter

Archie has scaly skin that likes to be touched. Springer will crawl up your arm.

Children attending the Point in Time Summer Adventure Day Camp on Aug. 1 got to meet Archie and Springer along with some of their other friends at the West Guilford Community Centre.

The camp hosted Zoo to You, a session that introduced kids to exotic animals including an American alligator, a red-eyed tree frog, a hairless guinea pig and a tarantula.

While the animals were taken around the room each child got their own personal time with the creatures.

Now in its 11th year, the day camp is run over a seven-week period throughout the summer at various locations throughout Haliburton County.

Reads of the week

Book of the Week

American Dervish by Ayad Akhtar

Haunted by guilt, Hayat Shah remembers growing up in Milwaukee in the early 1980s.

A young Pakistani boy, whose parents left their families' fundamentalism behind when they came to America, Hayat found transformation through his mother's friend, Mina. Beautiful and intelligent, Mina teaches the boy about the Qur'an but when she falls in love with Nathan Wolfson, a Jewish physician, Hayat becomes wildly jealous. He doesn't understand Mina's belief that faith is about personal interpretation and, in spite of his family's relative secularism, extremism begins to develop in Hayat's mind.

This provocative coming of age story about the struggle to find a religious identity has an abundance of lessons to teach us. You can reserve American Dervish today in print or talking book formats at the Haliburton County Public Library.

Junior Book of the Week — Young Adult Title

Daughter of Smoke and Bone by Laini Taylor

Part fairy tale, romance, horror and fantasy, Laini Taylor's Daughter of Smoke and Bone weaves together multiple genres, and in doing so, brings readers a beautifully crafted and remarkably creative book.

The story follows 17-year-old Karou, a human born between worlds, who is one of few who is aware that other-worldly creatures exist. But Karou lacks the simplest of knowledge of her own life, as who she is and where she comes from are both mysteries. She now attends art school in Prague, but was raised by fantastical creatures in the world of Elsewhere, where she is still able to travel using magical portals located around the world. But when mysterious handprints begin appearing on these portals, and a deadly angel attacks her on the streets of Morocco, Karou realizes that there is far more to the story than what she was told.

Daughter of Smoke and Bone is available to reserve in both print and audiobook formats from Haliburton County Public Library today.

Local Celebrity Read

"I have just finished reading Surprised Pink Geraniums by local author Pat Brown," says Beth Johns, who you may recognize from one of her many extracurricular activities, including fiddle bands (Celtic Slow Jam, Simply Befuddled), French horn bands (Highlands Concert Bands, Highlands Brass) and set painting for the Highlands Summer Theatre.

"The book is a memoir, written in a series of short vignettes," says Johns. "The author began writing in earnest following the sudden death of her second husband several years ago. This is a love story. Pat writes of her marriage to Tom, their life together, their beloved dogs, their families, her experience of loss and grief, and her healing journey. Her writing is at times very serious and deep, and at times hilariously funny, at times pragmatic.

"This book will appeal to readers who enjoy well-crafted writing, personal stories, and thoughtful reflections on the meaning of life," Johns concludes. "Don't miss this book."

News & Events

Cottagers of Redstone Lake, take heed

The Redstone Lake Cottagers Association (RLCA) recently held its annual general meeting in a packed Haliburton Forest and Wild Life Reserve hall. RLCA actually represents the resident members of Big Redstone, Little Redstone and Pelaw Lakes. The annual meeting provided an agenda full of relevant topics to this area, such as the health of the lakes and related septic "smarts," the current state of road access, the proposed new Tree Preservation Bylaw, expanding Internet access plans, and the results of a recent housing survey.

A significant portion of the meeting was reserved for discussion regarding the startling 2011 results of the lake stewards water testing. While the RLCA lakes have enjoyed a relatively low and stable level of phosphates since 2003 (3.4 to 6.4 ppm), the 2011 levels reached a new high of 8.4 ppm. Phosphates are one of the main contributors to lake degradation and must be monitored closely to maintain healthy lakes. Phosphate levels are strongly influenced by the products we use in our cottages. The association acknowledged this alarming trend and urged all residents to be mindful of the products they use on a daily basis. Products free of phosphates and chlorine are especially recommended. Septic "Smarts" speaker Rob Davis further emphasized this and informed the attendees that Environment Canada recognizes such products by ascribing a large green dot on the labels of products, or statements of "OECD" qualified.

The need to address the negative trend in phosphate and calcium levels has prompted a membership drive by the association. While there are approximately 700 cottages in the Redstone/Pelaw lake area, only 212 cottage residents are current members. In order to ensure clear and timely communication is conveyed, the board members will be visiting all non-member cottages over the next several weeks to encourage participation in the association and continued awareness of the health of the lakes.

The association also noted that the availability of high-speed Internet service is becoming very important to its members. Thus the presentation by Lisa Severson of the Eastern Ontario Regional Network on expansion plans for Internet access was most welcome. The RLCA area has been mapped into three sections, with varying degrees and modes of access. All phases of construction are to be completed by March 31, 2014.

Information on the imminent new Tree Preservation Bylaw was provided by Jane Tousaw, director of planning, Haliburton County. The objective of this bylaw is to sustain a healthy natural environment and to maintain and improve the ecosystem. Residents of the RLCA area are encouraged to understand this initiative and to respect the legislation with regard to their own properties, within 30 metres of the high water mark of the shoreline (measured horizontally). The target effective date is August 2012.

RCLA's main focus is health of the lakes

While the primary focus of the RLCA is the health of the lakes, there was also significant interest expressed in the state of the municipal road access to the area. Resident Ted Rule volunteered to review the ongoing discussion with the municipal office. It was acknowledged that the municipal budget is not sufficient to address all required work within a given year, thus the RLCA will work with the municipal office to prioritize road repairs over the next few years. The prioritization will be reviewed annually and adjusted as necessary.

Finally, incoming president Harvey Bates reviewed the results of a localized survey of residents with regard to their long-term housing needs. 29 per cent of respondents anticipated retiring in the area – ultimately to locate in the Village of Haliburton. This indication and the current lack of facilities to accommodate this shift prompted the county to initiate a wider survey of residents. Depending on the outcome of this survey, it may be extended to the full Dysart et al municipality. This will provide a more representative indicator for municipal planning and business development for the Village of Haliburton. Following the meeting's official conclusion, it was noted after-the-fact by one resident that the matter of the extreme fire hazard was not addressed in the meeting. This resident had witnessed open fires during the ban. The association has subsequently sent an email "blast" to all members urging them to respect the ban on fires under the present weather conditions.

The RLCA Board and its members wish to thank guest speakers Lisa Severson, Rob Davis, Jane Tousaw and Susan Norcross (Councillor for Ward 4), plus Bill Burden of the West Guilford Shopping Centre, and the Haliburton Forest for their support of the annual meeting. The full minutes will be posted on the RLCA website <http://rlca-haliburton.com>.

This photo isn't of wildlife, but of a bird strike imprint on the porch window of Bas and Myrtle Bouthoorn. They said they never found the bird. Let's hope he got away OK.

"We had our little visitor come by again," writes Linda Heeps. "We think it is one of the cubs that came with mom in the spring, but is now on his own." This photo was taken right after the bear knocked down the bird seed tray.

MacDuff had deep roots in Highlands East

Wilberforce

Hilda Clark

448-2018

The community has lost another long-time resident. Preston Carl MacDuff died peacefully at the hospital in Haliburton on Friday Aug. 3, just a few days before his 82nd birthday. Preston of the Gooderham MacDuff family and his late wife Maxine (Ackley) lived and raised their family in Wilberforce. They lived quietly here in their retirement years. Preston spent many of his working years in the woodworking/lumber industry in this area. Whether in the workforce or helping out a neighbour, he was a good and able worker.

In recent years some health problems kept him close to home where his son Howard resided with him. Sympathy is extended to son Carl and Shirley, daughters Debbie and Louise and Howard. Also to grandchildren Dianne and Jason and great grandchildren Austin and Ron. Preston was brother to Charlotte, Kenneth, Elgin, Marie and the late Violet, Marjorie and George.

At Preston's request there will be a private family visitation at the Gordon Monk Funeral Home on Wednesday, Aug. 8 followed by a private family graveside interment service at the Glamorgan cemetery in Gooderham. Rest in peace, Preston.

Jazz is back. Dave and Ann Watson's place on Esson Lake will be the place to be on Saturday evening Aug. 11 between 7 and 11 p.m. to enjoy jazz by the lake. Car pooling is a good idea.

The jazz musicians will also be featured at the Wilberforce United Church service on Sunday, Aug. 12 beginning at 11:30 a.m.

The Highlands East Studio Tour takes place both this weekend Aug. 11 and 12 and the next one Aug. 18 and 19. Lots of art to enjoy and buy. Just get to one of the studios to learn about the others on the tour in various parts of Highlands East.

The Wilberforce Agricultural Fair hits town this weekend. Friday evening's program now includes a spaghetti supper at the LWMC from 5 to 8 p.m., the dog show at 6:30, ball hockey at the arena 7 to 8 p.m., and the pedal tractor obstacle course on the tennis court at 6:30 p.m. That's all in addition to the pony pull at 7 p.m.

Start your Saturday at the fair with pancakes and sausages at the LWMC between 8 and 11 a.m. Then meeting the animals: the goats the rabbits and the cow, etc., is one sure way to keep the fair authentic... The fun goes on all day with live music, Doug's model railway, antique farm machinery, scarecrow making, geocaching, rope making and the horse draw. Of course everyone checks out who entered what and who won what in the curling rink where the culinary arts, the horticulture and homecrafts displays are located. And this is just a sample of fun things to do at the fair. No need to go home to eat supper. Enjoy roast beef and all the trimmings at the LWMC beginning at 5 p.m.

Under sunny skies last Friday and Saturday dozens of artists painted in the great outdoors capturing amazing images in this part of our wonderful Highlands.

To a non-painter it is intriguing to observe in the show of their work how the artists have chosen such a variety of centres of interest.

Being plein-air (outdoor) artists of course they paint the natural environment but many choose to show that humans have touched the area. They may include an old tractor, a canoe pulled up on shore, a bridge, a portion of a gate to draw one's eyes to a single brilliant branch of August red. Among the many delightful and even unusual landscapes it comes as a surprise to discover a painting of your own home as seen from a quiet side road.

The fourth annual Plein-Air Arts Festival brought many talented artists to our area. Congratulations and thanks to Tracey Lee Green and her family for this fine festival. How does she do it with her tea room in Haliburton Village to operate as well?

The Lloyd Watson Centre was turned into a fine gallery for the juried art show and sale on Sunday, Aug. 5. Congratulations to the award winners. Doug Mays won the Ontario Plein Air Society award for his watercolour, Buttermilk Fall #1. The Juror's Choice went to Sheila Davis for her Indigo Summer in oil.

In the dry category, painting done before the festival, there were four awards. The Furnace Falls Award went to Doug Mays for his watercolour Bowditch Point, Fort Myers, Fla. The Essonville Church Award went to Heather Collins for her oil, Around the Bend. The Autumn Colours Award went to Charles Spratt for his acrylic, Edge Of The Forest. The Gull River Award went to Alan Bain for his watercolour Spring Rocks.

There were also four wet awards, those painted during this festival. The Sleeping Woman in The Forest Award went to Heather Collins for her oil, Wiggle Fence. The Hawk River Log Chute Award went to Dalibor Dejanovic for her pastel entitled Sunrise. The View From The Dorset Tower Award went to Sheila Davis for her oil, Indigo Summer. The Ritchie Falls Award went to Helen Walter for her acrylic, Sunny Days.

We hope all the artists and their families and friends who were in our area had a very good time here. Do come back.

Nicholls Cup visit appreciated by all

West Guilford

Eleanor Cooper

754-2278

You don't have to have a special reason for coming home, but the incentive was great for Bernie Nicholls when he hoisted and hosted the Stanley Cup in hometown localities. It was proudly displayed right here at Bill Burden's store on Aug. 1 for an estimated 200 fans as well as at the arena, the marina in town and Curry Motors. Such a memorable, proud moment for Bernie and his many Guilford and Haliburton fans.

McKenna, Bernie's daughter, also spent over two weeks with him at George and Marj Nicholls's place – a good visit with grandparents.

Hats off to Lisa Barry, graduate of Alberta College with a bachelor's degree in ceramics for her participation in the Tour de Forest last weekend. Lisa's schedule involves time at her pottery wheel and time with her family, husband Matt and their young son.

A tip of the hat as well to Cecilia Scott who is a tireless volunteer at the Red Cross blood clinics and at Canoe FM to mention just two of her volunteering jobs. These extend also into her work with her St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church duties. So many people to be proud of in our community!

On Aug. 4, the wedding reception for Laura Stouffer and Jeff Sinclair was celebrated at the West Guilford centre. Congratulations and best wishes from all here who have known Laura for her growing up time in Haliburton.

Euchre scores for last Tuesday: high – Norma Geddes and Henk van Nood; low – Barbara Brownsberger and Barry Butler; most lone hands – Tina Hadley and George Milne.

Congratulations to Margaret Giles on her gardening achievements. Judges from Toronto came to Minden's horticultural society and placed Margaret's plants as follows: honourable mention for garlic; first place for her 11-inch diameter broccoli; first place for her zucchini; first place for her burgundy shamrock; and second place for her geranium. Well done, Margaret!

In memoriam

LEVECK, Frances-
in loving memory of a dear husband who passed away August 3, 1999.

God knew that he was suffering
The hills were hard to climb
So he closed his weary eyelids
And whispered peace be thine
Away in the beautiful hills of God
By the valley of rest so fair
Sometime, someday we know not when
We will meet our loved one there.

*Sadly missed by loving wife Clarabelle, daughter Eva, son Eddie, daughter
Emily and grandchildren.*
